I've just tested on the demo version (<https://demo.openatlas.eu/place>) and it worked as expected. After clicking insert and continue the entry was created and I had again an empty form to enter the next one.

What wasn't working in your case?

Ah sorry, the location isn't saved! So if you create a place with a location (in my case a point) and "Insert and Continue" then the place will be saved but not the location!

I just inserted a location Atlantis in the demo and draw a triangle in the Atlantic and it saved just fine. I also tried the other location alternatives.

So just to be sure, you experiencing that the place is saved, you get to the next insert form but after that the things you draw on the map aren't in the saved place anymore?

After some testing with Bernhard it turned out that this is a Chromium specific issue and I will look into it. Thanks for reporting!

- Status changed from In Progress to Closed

Turned out Chrome/Chromium doesn't like a 'return false' after a JavaScript form submission when using the "insert and continue" button.

Fixed in 3.12.0

I uploaded the new version to the dev-demo <https://demo-dev.openatlas.eu/place>
You can test it there if you want, don't forget to refresh browser cache.
